

Cordjia Capital Projects Group Helps Support Land Conservation with Donation to Maine Coast Heritage Trust

CAMDEN, MAINE March 24, 2015 - A leading provider of Project & Cost Management and Architecture & Engineering services is giving back to the community with a donation to the Maine Coast Heritage Trust to help fund the development of a new walking trail at Aldermere Farm in Rockport, Maine.

Aldermere Farm, a landmark of midcoast Maine, is one of the world's premier breeders of Belted Galloway cattle. The 136-acre farm is owned and managed by Maine Coast Heritage Trust, a statewide land conservation organization dedicated to protecting the scenic beauty, outdoor recreational opportunities, ecological diversity, and working landscapes of the Maine coast. The Trust maintains Aldermere as a working farm and educational center, helping visitors deepen their appreciation for land conservation and sustainable agriculture.

The new trail will be a level, hard surface suitable for seniors and small children to walk on and use for fitness. Cordjia's donation will support the goal of finishing and opening the trail for the upcoming season.

About Cordjia Capital Projects Group

Cordjia Capital Projects Group, leaders in capital project delivery solutions, is a consulting firm providing Architecture & Engineering, Building Performance Solutions, and Project & Cost Management.. Over the last 25 years, our founders have successfully delivered more than 5 million square feet of projects, totaling over $2 billion – under budget and on schedule.

The firm has offices in Camden, Portland, and York Maine and Wilmington, Delaware. More information about Cordjia Capital Projects Group is available at www.cordjiacapitalprojects.com.

